MAUMEE VALLEY CENTER DAY

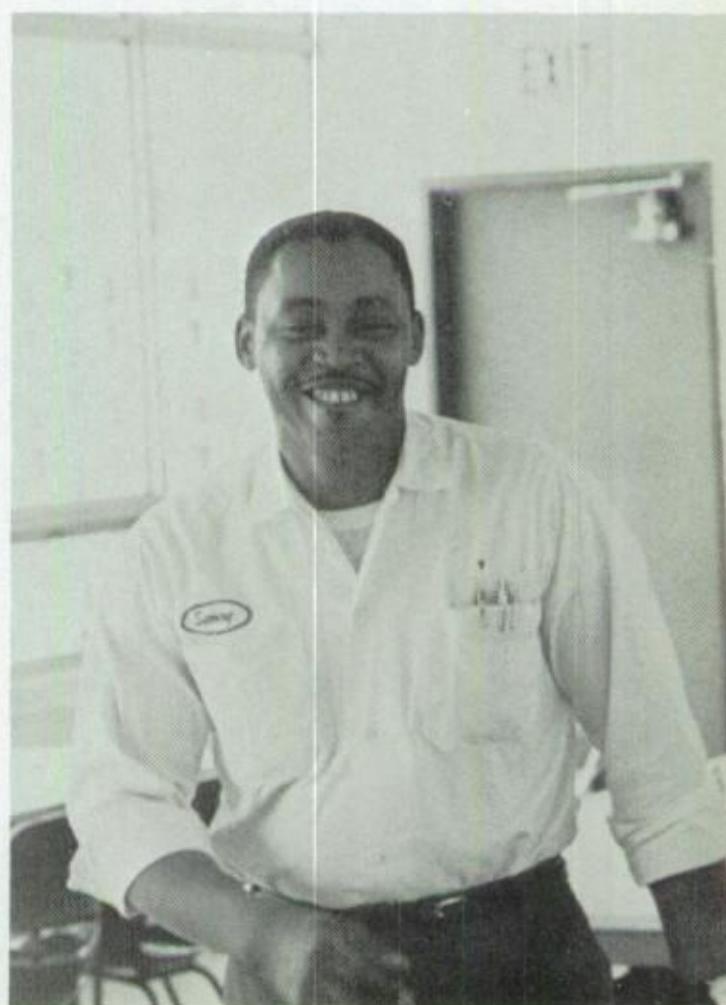

*the class of 1968
presents
this edition of the weather vane*

the dedication

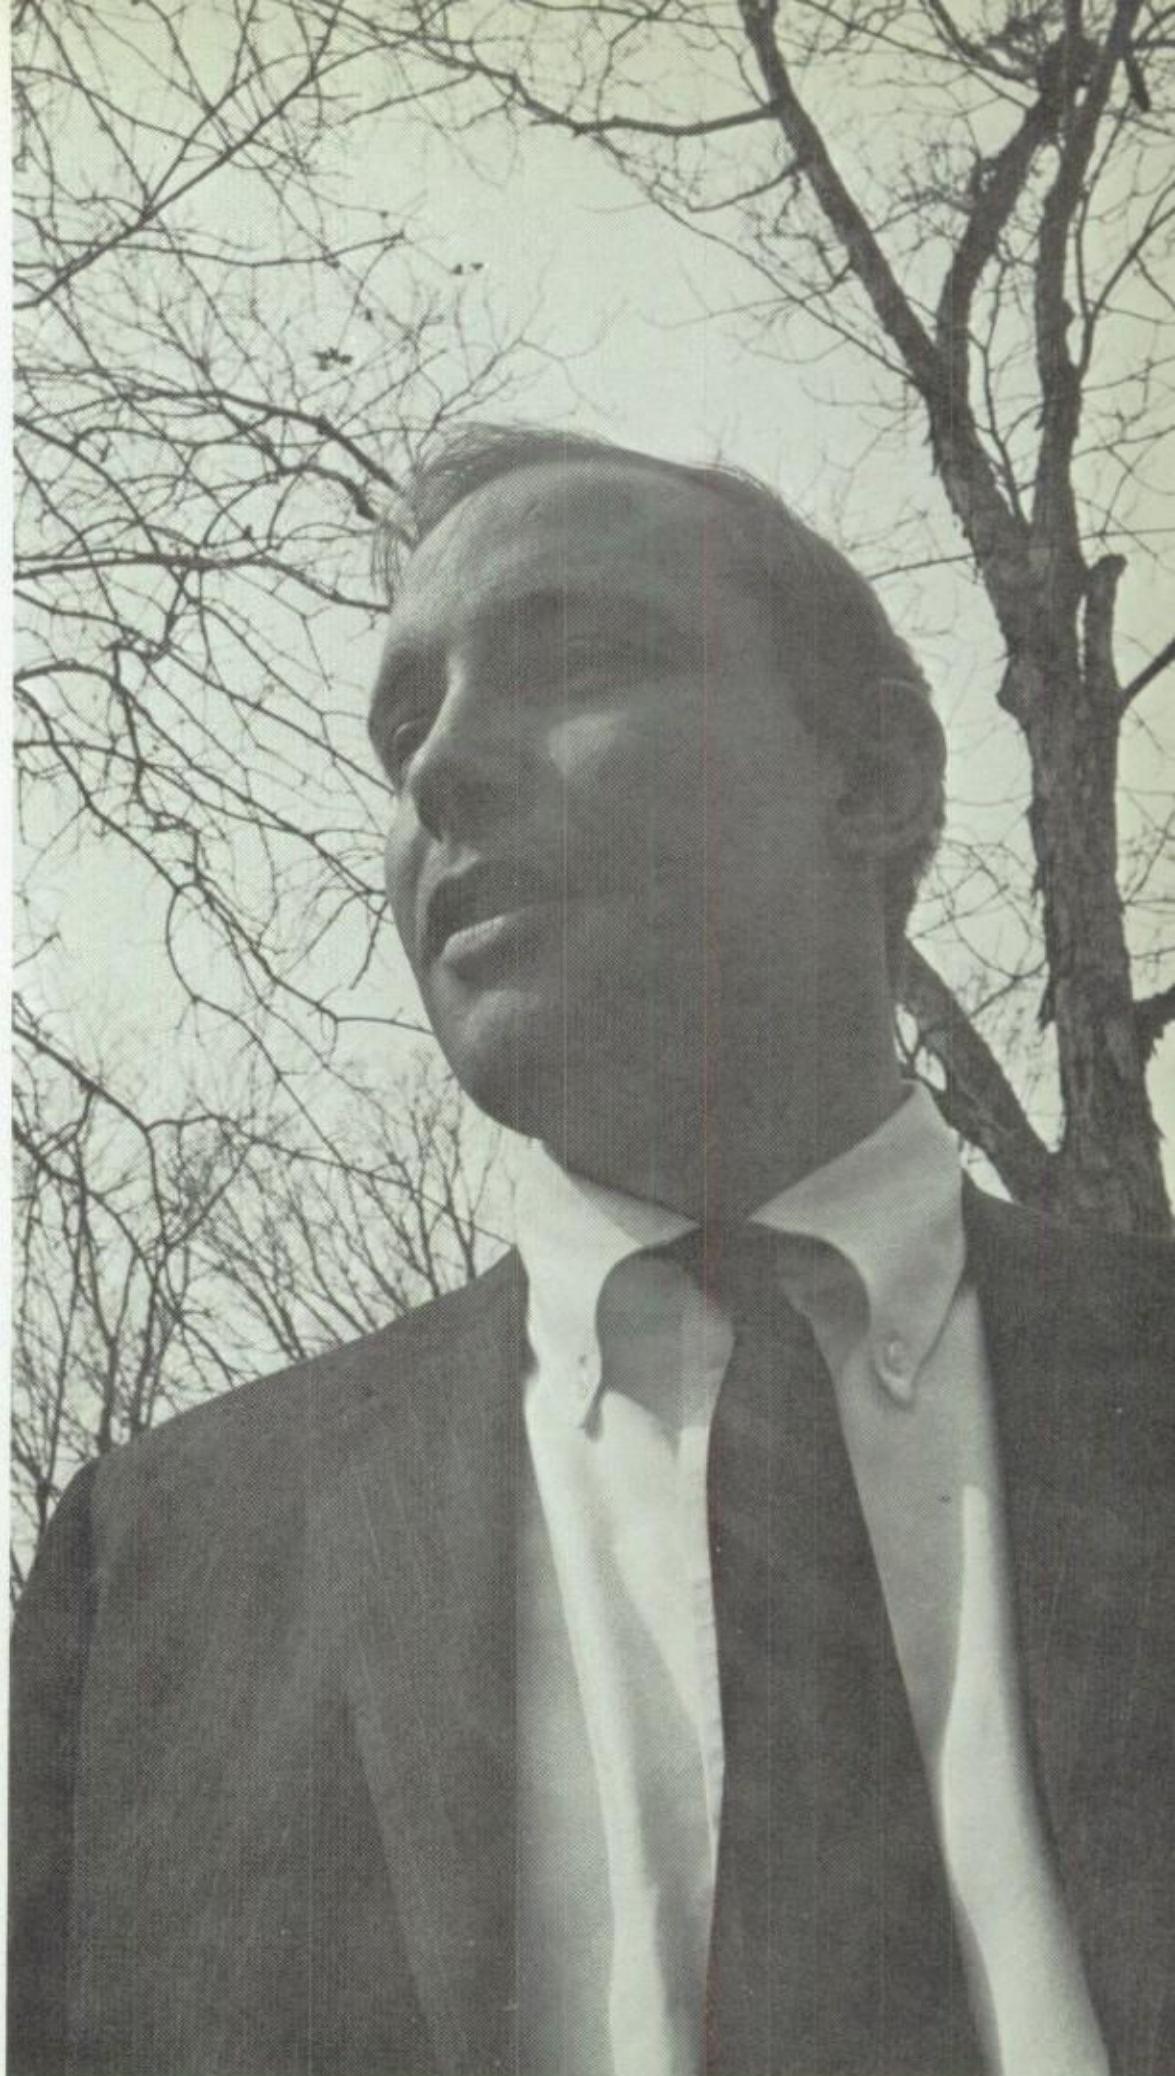

The Class of 1968 dedicates this volume of the Weather Vane to a man with a cheerful "Hi" for everyone and a ready willingness to lend a helping hand. This graduating class will always remember the smiling face of

SONNY VAN SHAW

To You From Me
I don't know you;
and yet I put my mind into your hands—
stripped like a plastic model.
It has fallen in your hands,
not placed there by my choice.
It is my mind complete,
unscaled, ungutted, not deodorized;
and naked shining in the light—

A mind that lived in a way your mind
may not accept; a mind that has lived in a way perhaps yours never will;
and yet, it's your mind too—
part of it.

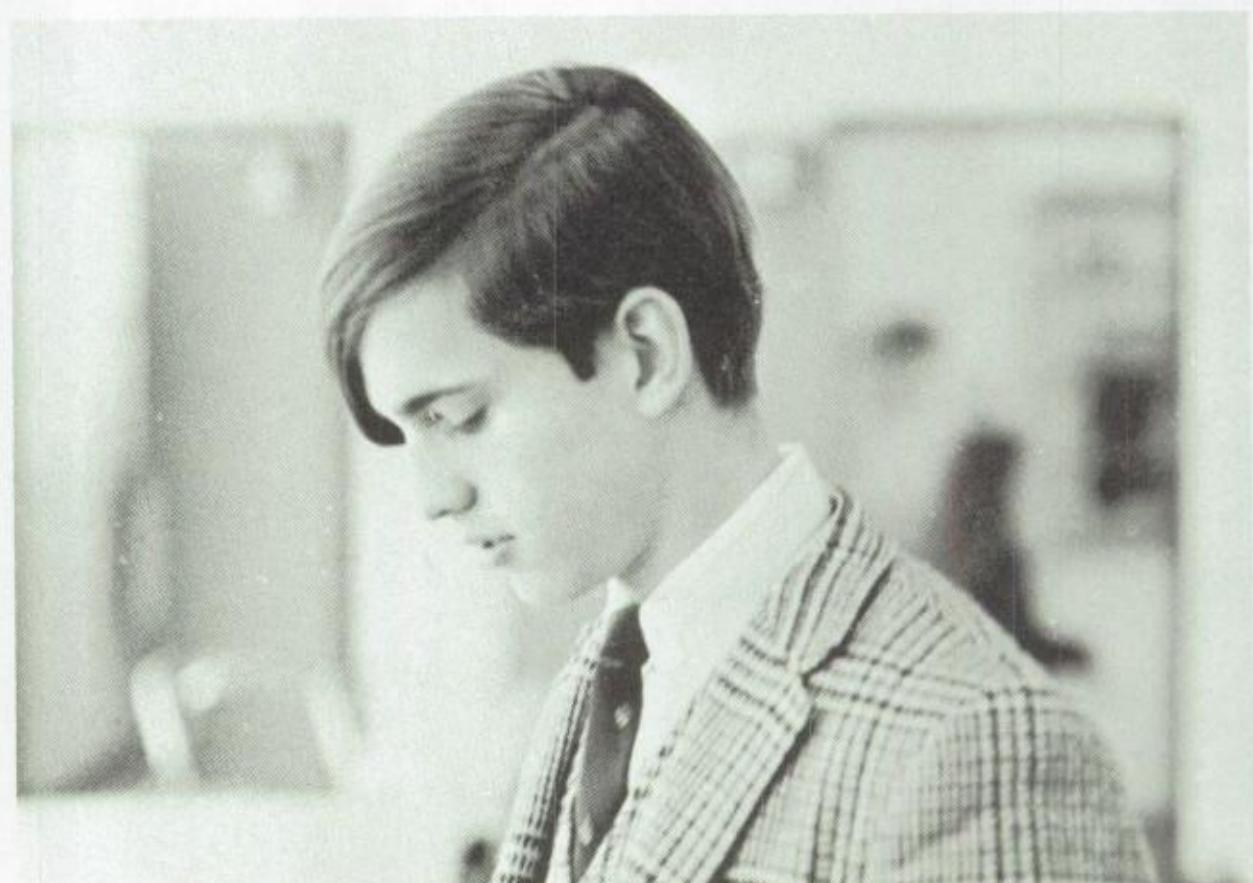

Don't be afraid . . . go ahead—look in and wonder, worry, frown, or throw my mind aside as just another stone that skitters, and then sinks below the shining water of our being . . .

And don't tell lies . . . don't say you understand what I'm trying to say.
Or, if you do, you truly lie—
and don't say to me it's nonsense.
Or if you do, I'll know your just reading
the words—and don't say it's the truth;
or this is clearly marked in every space.
Just do me the courtesy of saying nothing,
of being confused, of looking up mid-sentence
and thinking your own thoughts.

I don't know where
But it takes me there.
It leaves me cold
In a warm heart.

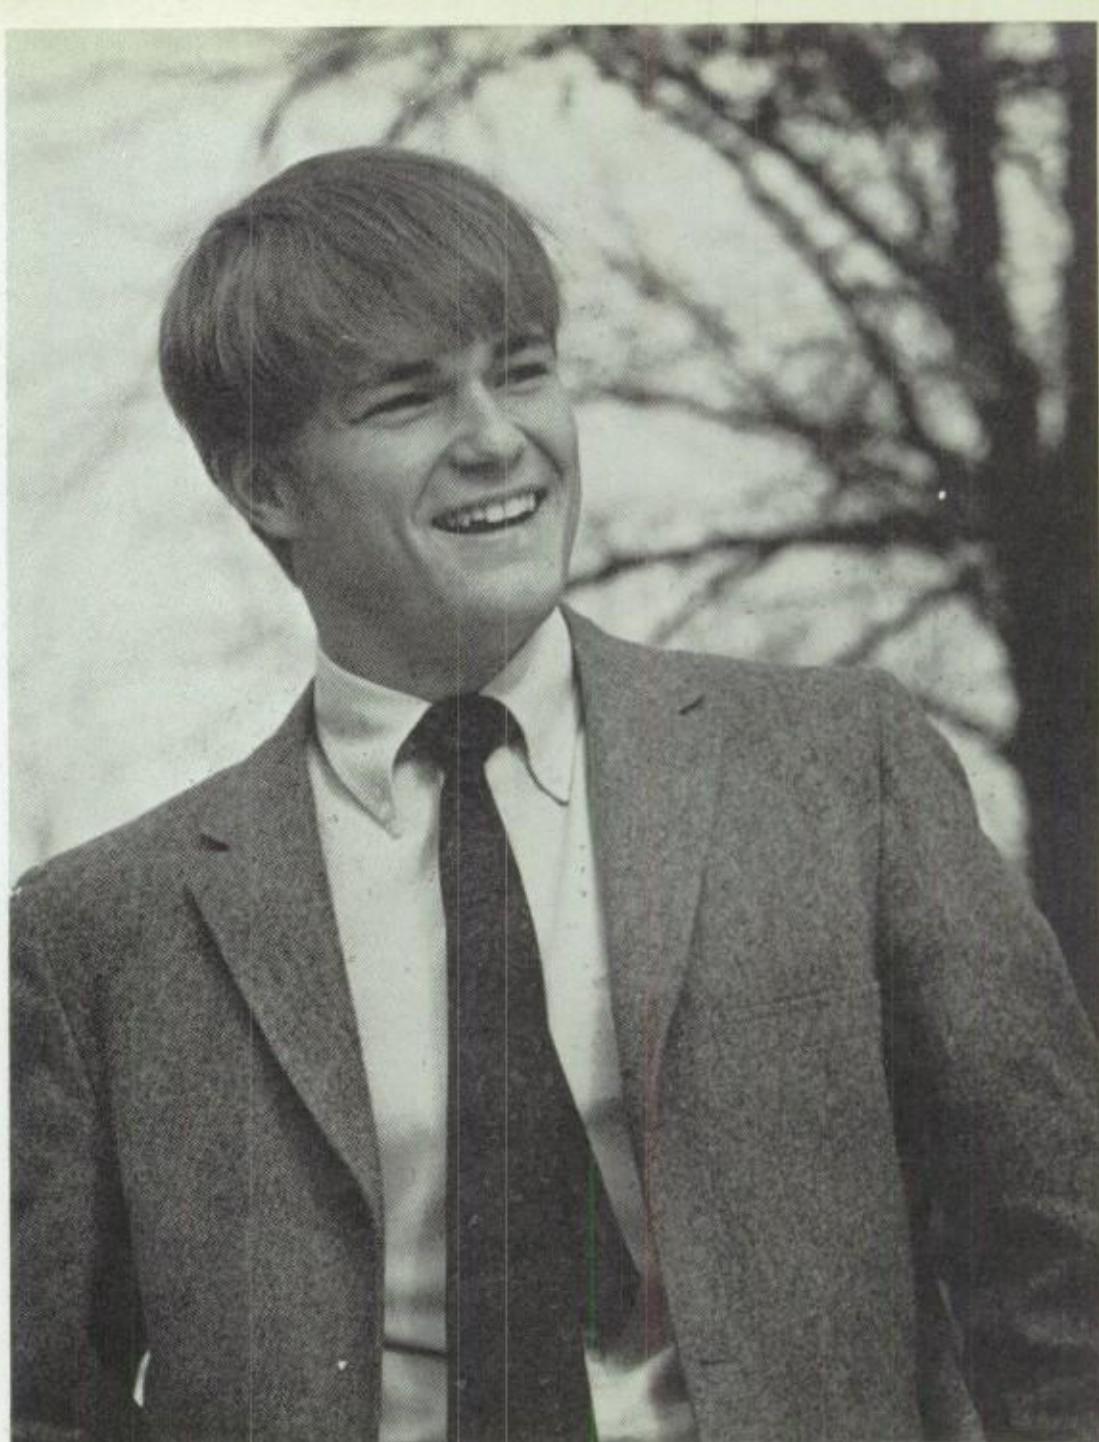

Somewhere there is a time
That holds existence and soul.
I'll thrive in minds,
Alive!

It is a mystery to nature
It's instituted between flesh
and divinity.
It's lost in answers,
Lost!

Can sand be found in sand
Or stars in stars?
Is the unknown found
With time?

Well it's the time of Life I need
Not the time of day.
I've got the scent and
I'm following its end.

Follow me, leave me,
I'm living for death.

We have about thirty years to decide if man can stay on earth.

When I am dead Spare the thorn from the thistle,
And plant wheat to feed my soul.
Fill this empty space with
hours of expression,
Rather than angered gargoyle.
Stare not into the grave
But beyond the future.
Only your thought will Overflow into my coffin.
Fear not my flesh
For it is only a fetter of skin.
In giving up life,
I take the world.

And so we lick our chops at Birmingham
and say, "See!
Southern dogs have vindicated me—
I knew that this would come."
But who are we to be so proud that savages
have proven a point
taken late in time
to show how liberal I am?
Above the struggle
I can quite afford to be:
well-fed, degreed,
not beat—elite,
up North.
I send checks,
support your cause,
and lick my chops
at Jim Crow laws
and Birmingham—
where you,
not I am.

there was a month yet to the end of the season,
every day of this month Smolak and i rode on roller-coaster together before large crowds . . .
and while we climbed and dipped and swooped swerved and rose again higher than the ferris wheels and fell, we held on to each other.

whatever gains i ever made were always due to love and nothing else. we hugged each other, the bear and i, with something greater than terror and flew in those gilded cars.

Love is not all: it is not meat nor drink
Nor slumber nor a roof against the rain;
Nor yet a floating spar to men that sink
And rise and sink and rise and sink again;
Love can not fill the thickened lung with breath,
Nor clean the blood, nor set a fractured bone;
Yet many a man is making friends with death
Even as I speak, for lack of love alone.
It well may be that in a difficult hour,
Pinned down by pain and moaning for release,
Or nagged by want past resolution's power,
I might be driven to sell your love for peace,
Or trade the memory of this night for food.
It well may be. I do not think it would.

Or as Gertrude Stein Says . . .
The sky is as blue as itself,
and the tree is as green as its leaves.
How shall I write a poem about today?

The tree stands—
but the tree has no feet.
The tree leans its head—
but the tree is not tired,
growing without resting,
resting without pausing.

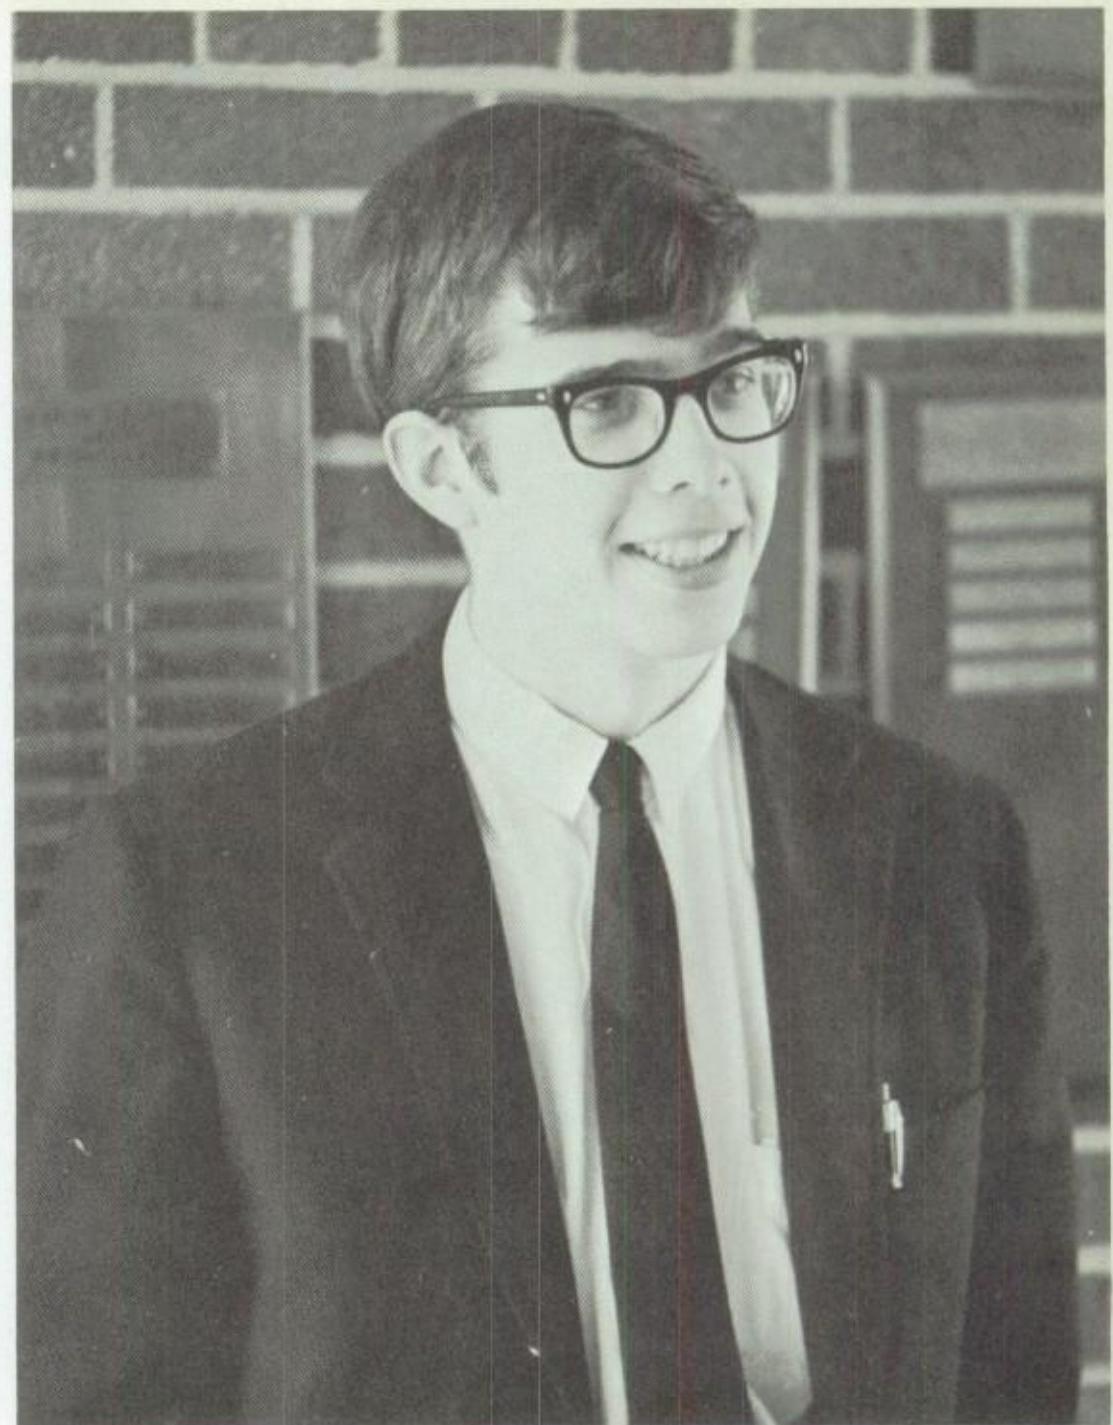

Let me try again.

The wind blows.
How, having no whistle?
The wind sings.
How, having no tune?
The wind sighs.
How, having no heart?
Yet it is lovers who borrow from the wind their softness and storms.

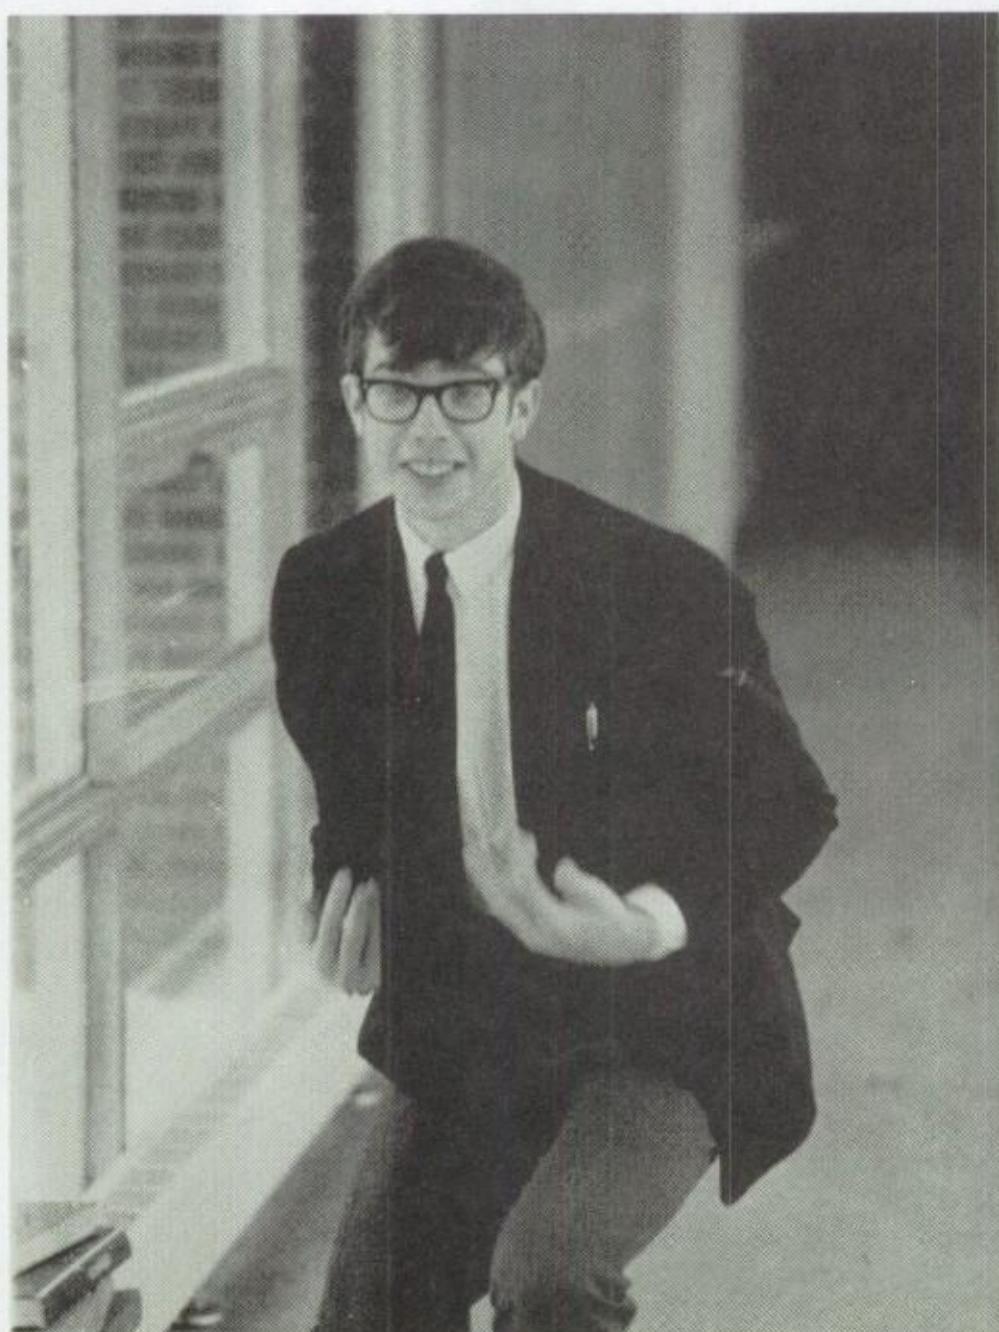

Well then, the wind moves.
How, having no body
but the motion of bodies?

When the sky is as blue as itself,
and the tree is as green as its leaves—
a poem is only taking a child's downy skull
gently between your hands and, with not so much breath as might startle a gnat's wing,
whispering,
“Look!”

we stood in the windy city the gypsy boy and i we slept on the breeze in the midnight with a raindrop and tears in our eyes but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we huddled in the derelict building and when he thought i was asleep he laid his poor coat around my shoulders and shivered there beside me in a heap but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we sang and cracked the sky with laughter our breath turned to mist in the cold our years put together counted forty but our eyes told the dawn that we were old but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun mirror, mirror hanging in the sky won't you look down what's happening here below i stand here singing to the flowers so very few people really know but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we stood in the windy city the

"... You shall no longer take things at second or third hand, nor look through the eyes of the dead, nor feed on the spectres in books, you shall not look through my eyes either, nor take things from me, you shall listen to all sides and filter them for yourself . . ."

Leaves of Grass — Walt Whitman

"... It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude..."

SELF-RELIANCE — Ralph Waldo Emerson

"... If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away . . ."
